

ONE TREATY, ONE

NATION

Racism is the act of treating people differently because of their race - either by privileging or disadvantaging them. Legalised racism, giving superior rights, natural resources and race-based funding to those who identify as "part-Maori," is holding New Zealand back and creating an unfair society.

The Maori people who ceded sovereignty to Queen Victoria in 1840 no longer exist. Their descendants, usually with more European blood in them than Maori, are one of numerous ethnic groups in modern New Zealand society in which we participate as citizens with rights based on citizenship, not ethnicity.

In such a society no single group should be entitled to rights, privileges and special funding that is not available to others.

There is only one treaty -

Te Tiriti, signed by over 500 chiefs.

The benefits of colonisation for Maoris, lifting them out of a violent Stone Age existence, far outweighed any negative consequences.

It's time for New Zealanders to end their apathy and understand what is being done in the name of the "Treaty" to our rights, resources, heritage and prospects by the increasing power of a newly-created "tribal elite" that is systematically undermining our institutions and our age old sovereignty.

It's time for the Waitangi Tribunal to be abolished in the interests of the nation and its future as, by either gross error or deliberate lie, this body has now declared that the northern chiefs and, by implication, all the chiefs did not cede sovereignty in 1840, thus driving a sword through the nation's unity and constitutional validity.

It's time to acknowledge the truth that there is neither "partnership" nor "principles" in the Treaty. These fictions were invented 150 years after the event by self-interested parties so as to give superior rights to part-Maoris which the words of the Treaty do not.

It's time to end all co-governance agreements - as they undermine New Zealand's unity and sovereignty.

It's time to take a stand for democracy and equality of citizenship and to face down all demands for racial preference.

It's time to stop voting for any candidate of any party who is not prepared to work body and soul to end all race-based privileges and special funding.

It's time to end the concept of separate Maori wards in local government.

New Zealand does not belong to one race. It belongs to all of us.

If we don't act to end the racial privileges of one group of New Zealanders, we will become more and more second-class citizens in the land that was built by the pioneers.

ROLLING THUNDER

For further information, see the recently published book, by Hugh Barr, Don Brash, Mike Butler, Reuben Chapple, Peter Cresswell, Bruce Moon, David Round and John Robinson.

One Treaty, One Nation

This truthful, thoughtful and no-holds-barred book should be read by every New Zealander. It stands for equality of citizenship and exposes the injustice and dangers of race-based privileges for a favoured few.
